Mobile home axle brake parts

Mobile home axle spindle size. How to put axles on a mobile home.

They gave me a pair of 6k 8 lug axles a year or so for three, but that was shortly after I ordered 300k worth of trailers from them... If anyone can find a good price on the 5-6k axles, I'm interested in them also for our trailer. Is it something I could buy at Tractor Supply? For now he has no brakes. I am thinking of buying a trailer with axles for mobile homes. 94 Toyota P/U, double boxes, rolled and locked, SAS, tube bed, exo cage. If we place a group order together, I could try to save some money for us. I haven't looked at mine yet, I need to, but I was thinking of getting spindles and doing kind of that Billa Vista mentioned. "Well, so far my plan worked, until we tried to put it all together one night, and that's when we realized something was definitely wrong" -Cash Well, I ended up buying new axles. I found them very useful. I've heard of them, but I don't know anyone who's done business with them before. The backing plates are also welded. They buy Dexter shafts from a local seller and can get quantity discounts. I'm close to having enough volume to get maximum discount (40-90 % off the list depending on the part) If anyone needs any specific part of the trailer, anything from lights, to tongue jacks, to tire/wheel to axle assemblies let me know (either here or through PM) and I'll get a full list and let you know pre $.... That foot in the bag that's gonna be to fix. DUANE A true friend will NOT get you out of prison. I determined, the price, it would be pretty much the same price as just replacing the axles. While it's not a big fan of the hub/rim setup, the tires are as f or g rated, and for 50 dollars an axle you can just replace the whole thing is go bad. There are some 5-6k axes on eBay for $ 300ish but hard to say what transportation will be. Collection of pieces and I also removed the backing plates, made new bolt on mounts and installed the red neck trailer supply brake kit on my I also have mobile home axles on my trailer, and the brakes are shot. I will be placing an order of fullÅo (tow parts) around the first of May. Very nice guys to deal with my past experience Big Dixie Boggers, unofficial member of the Obj photos! Red neck I bought axes and other things from them. I hate mobile home style wheels and tires with a passion, so I looked to convert them into 8 lug style. He'll be sitting next to you. Sam 1988 K5 Blazer "Red Rover" and the 1946 Willys Cj2a built by the old man I work with a guy in Spartanburg on Caolina Trailers. 94 xj beat not wanting! Doubler 193/205 of the H1 of 42 of the D60. 95 5-Speed-Ecors Rig I think he said he was going to remove the brake backing plate on the MH axes and weld a plate for a regular brake setting. You can get replacement house axles, with good brakes, from a furniture engine. 1) No, you can't get them at the tractor supplier 2) I've been informed by several people that we peeled the trailer supply at Linolnton has the brakes. There is a set that you can screw / into a new set of brakes and it works great. I wheel a Ramcharger not just-stock. "Well up" so far my plan was all right, until we tried to put it all together one night, and that's when we realized that something was definitely wrong "Cash Redneck is much cheaper, if you can find someone with an account. If they're going to let you use the #. From what I understand it depends on the axes you have. I have put calling for quotes on the axes; Is Redneck a good store to deal with? There's brakes on the rear axle, and I collapsed them today.
